

Captaris Image Enables Microsoft® Office SharePoint® Server 2007

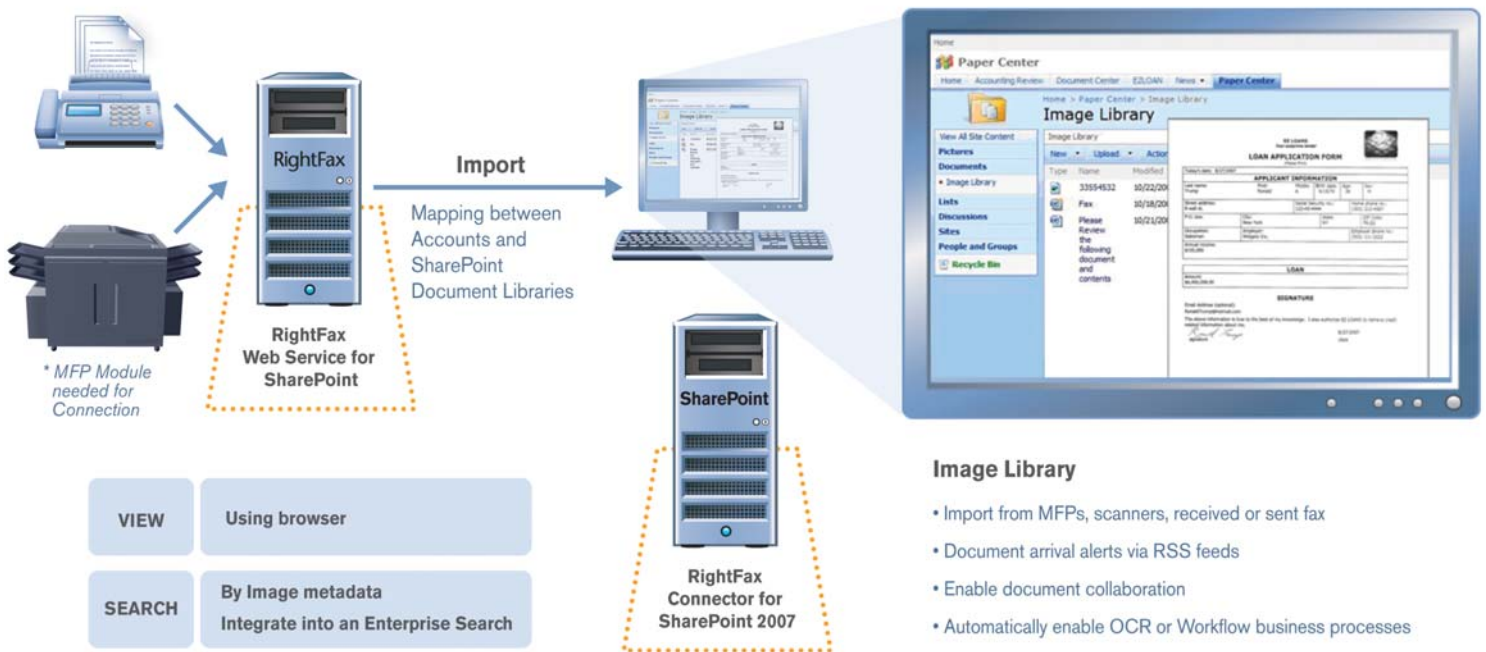

Manually routing images received into document libraries?

Needing to automate your business processes?

Many organizations use SharePoint as a central repository and collaboration site. In fact, SharePoint is quickly growing to be the main place for enterprise search, document sharing and content management. But, in order to share document images that have been received like invoices, loan applications and orders with others, users still manually upload or import files into SharePoint. More over, SharePoint users want to integrate their business processes allowing automated import and distribution of critical information.

A captured image is typically the start of a business process needing automation. Captaris automates the feed of document images sent from MFP's, scanners and fax. Images automatically populate configured SharePoint libraries and users can select files for additional business processes using OCR and data workflow systems.
