

Capture and Index Information from Images

Manually copying and entering image metadata to databases and forms?

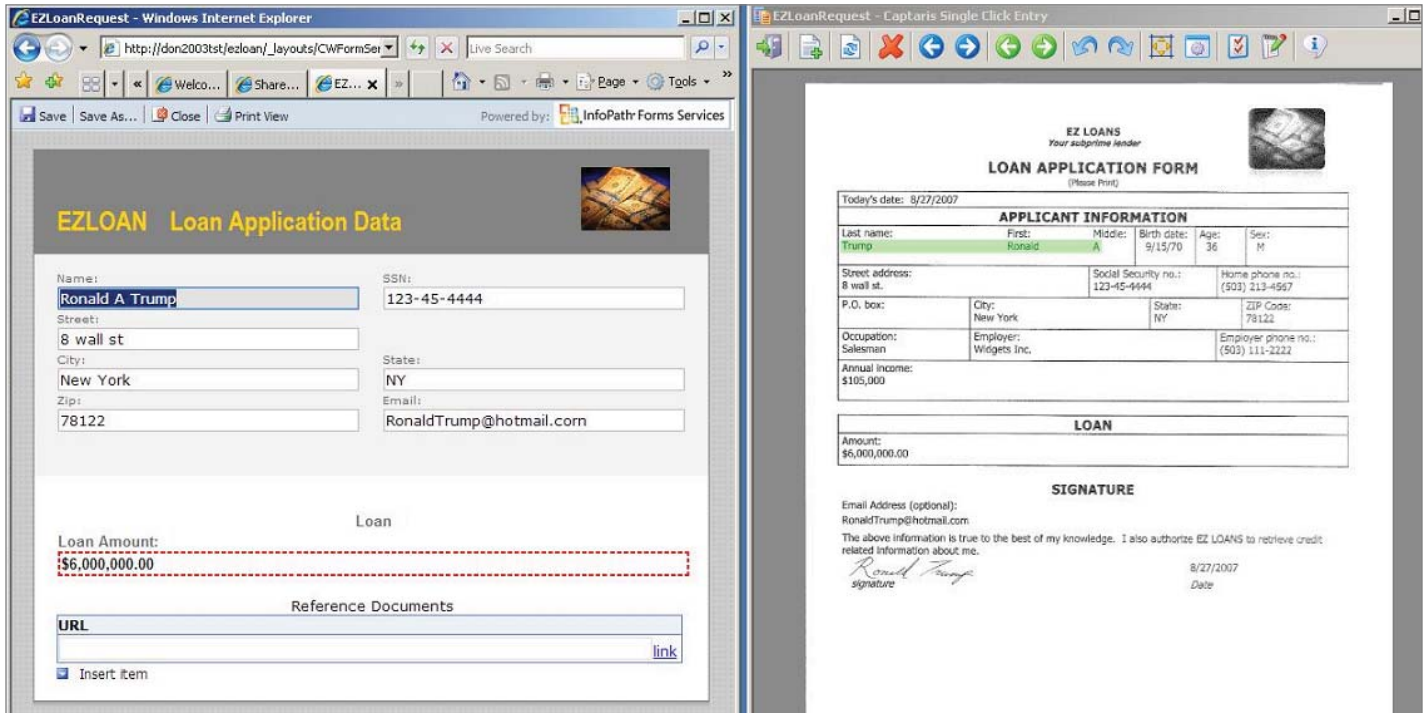

Needing to automate your information capture and extraction processes?

Looking to share image information with the rest of the enterprise?

Organizations are processing ever increasing volumes of document images daily to manage and grow their business. Manual data processing of images can be labor intensive and costly, affecting speed and efficiency. Customers are looking for solutions that allow easy manipulation of text and information.

Using OCR software to extract the metadata from document images for indexing has been successful in reducing problems with manual processing. Captaris easily analyzes and extracts metadata text from images using OCR software to populate line of business applications, Web forms and Microsoft Windows application forms for indexing, enterprise search and workflows.
